Frances Benjamin Johnston

(American, 1864 - 1952)

"Hampton Institute c.1900 Mixing fertiliser in an agriculture class at Hampton Institute, Virginia", unsigned,
silver gelatin photograph,
18.5 x 23.5cms, 31.5 x 41.5cms in frame.

Note: Hampton Institute (now Hampton University) was founded in 1868 to educate recently emancipated African Americans. By 1899, many of the students were children or grandchildren of former slaves, and one-fifth of the students were Native Americans. Hampton's educational philosophy revolved around vocational training, aiming to teach a range of practical skills and train future teachers.

One of America's first female photojournalists, Johnston had been commissioned by Hampton to showcase the philosophies and activities of the school. She made multiple prints of her Hampton photographs
